INTRODUCTION

It has always been special to have two artists working together on a collaborative project but it is a different take for the two to be in the artists to be mutually involved in intimate relationship with. To be present in the same household, to be in the same setting of workplace, to be both producing art for a living is indeed is different it was being compared to the artist themselves, individually. Instead of being the muse, the two would most likely become a motivating partner to one another. Nevertheless, the joint-venture is indeed an artistic decision if not art itself.

In sync, or being rhythmically inclined is to share the same melodic coherent without having to jeopardize conquering the limelight at the very same platform. Being in sync simply put it to be parallel; two or more lines that does not overlap or touch each other that would end cancelling up but however having the capacity of sharing the same movement towards respective end of the lines.

THE RELATIONSHIP

As far as fine art goes, it is more synonymous for an artist to muster every gist of her/his muses of the world or other worldly thoughts, process everything intimately and privately before puking all the ideas out in the form of artworks, performance or designs into the world. Some would even say artist works mysteriously and more like an introvert or a sociopath at worst. It is no secret that artists are sensitive beings that they would be only easily accessible after churning out their grand scheme of ideas. However so, not everything that was produced is comprehensible and some got lost in translation.

To say artists are loners and unworthy of the affection of another human being is an understatement. After all, they are human just as the same as the rest coming from different walks of life and profession. Nevertheless, having an artist falling in love or being in a relationship with another artist is not something far-fetched dream either. To name a few, there is Frida Kahlo and Diego Rivera, Marina Abramovic and Ulay, and Jasper Johns and Robert Rauschenberg. Despite trials and tribulations, they have made their passionate partnership work.

THE BALANCE

Ebb and flow just like the tide, is a very good example of value instilled and practiced in a successful relationship between spouses. And of course, there is no such specific formula to a beautiful relationship between two artists. For all we know, they are just as normal as any other couples. They are just a pair of people living in the same space. The balance somehow lie on the fact of not deferring from one to another by having the knowledge and understanding of each other's body of work and respective practice. In any traditional household that suggested the man goes to work to earn a living and the woman would have the responsibility to keep the house in check does not really resonate to this type of relationship.

Having extra pairs of hands and eyes would be beneficial in developing one's creative process without having to influence and sway from her/his original ideas. Hence, most ideas would be contained and given the chance of a second opinion internally without having to go through the help of one's outer circle.

THE THOUGH PROCESS

Living together might not only benefited the artist couple physically when it comes to artwork making process, but the planning that goes into the artistic process would also be of an assistance to each artist. Be it, in a thought challenging way that would critically develop and polish one idea to become more solid and sound.

Common interests, shared plate of aesthetics are just the beginning of a wonderful friendship between two artists. When it comes to fool-proofing any ideas, the dynamism of both of them can almost be seen as two sparring partner not just in respective visual outcomes but also can be viewed as each other's harshest critic. That is, of course for the betterment of the artists themselves. Some pairs started as collaborative and understanding partners in crime, and some would benefit from the mentor-protégée beginning. Nevertheless, the culmination of learning experience is what enriches the artist one way or another.

CONCLUSION

The reasoning behind having two artists tied together in life is not solely for the sake of unification or any form celebration of love. And, not every artist would find their way into each other well, intimately speaking. Blaming star signs as the probable cause for this union is like to say that faith after all, have the final say in everything. But, one cannot simply rule out the idea of serendipity.

Meanwhile, this happy accident that seems to bring two people together is a testament to rare occurrence of a symbiosis and is most likely a once a generation type of thing rather than a normal one. In the end, both of them are heading the same way, heading the same finish line, hand-in-hand, together. But, they will be on each respective axis and perhaps more accurately universe. After all, this is the state of being in sync, and not mixed nor fused.

The Artist: Kow Leong Kiang and Chong Ai Lei, Gan Chin lee and Liu Hsin-Ying, Amy Nazira and Hidayat Arshad, Anisa Abdullah and Khairul izham, Najib Ahmad Bamadhaj and Cinta Ayuandrea, and Yuki Tham and Nur Iman.

HEIKAL TAKI

Diego:

Truth is, so great, that I wouldn't like to speak, or sleep, or listen, or love. To feel myself trapped, with no fear of blood, outside time and magic, within your own fear, and your great anguish, and within the very beating of your heart. All this madness, if I asked it of you, I know, in your silence, there would be only confusion. I ask you for violence, in the nonsense, and you, you give me grace, your light and your warmth. I'd like to paint you, but there are no colors, because there are so many, in my confusion, the tangible form of my great love.
