Lufuno

Lufuno, directly translated to Love in Venda, is the title of a solo exhibition by Tzaneen born artist Jan Maanda Tshikhuthula. Tshikhuthula's work is a reflection of what he thinks the world will look like in a future, if struck by drought due to climate change. It is also his love letter to our beautiful planet and Limpopo where Tshikhuthula grew up.

Tshikhuthula speaks directly to the human spirit within all of us. He has emerged himself in the landscapes he created - a clear window of his imagination. He aims to spread awareness and important conversations about climate change.

"Art for me is a way of communicating my thoughts by using shapes, patterns, forms and textures. My intention is to arouse interest and to communicate my thoughts on this important issue. I wish to draw attention to the changing beauty of our landscape and inspire people to take responsibility of their roles of the current crisis we find ourselves in. The underlying issue in my work is the disconnection between us and the environment.

It seems like the Earth is trying to save itself from us."
